

Hebba is a woman of North African heritage who has been a freelance/ private contractor interpreter, translator, lecturer, and program manager for more than 25 years. She received a bilingual education in a British school in Egypt and holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Alexandria University.

She had to work diligently to advance in a society whose customs and traditions have not been supportive of professional women. However, through this adversity, she has developed a combination of firmness, perseverance and sensibility that have been effective in dealing with a broad variety of situations.

Hebba's interpretation experience began overseas and she spent two decades serving as a public liaison for businesses, both independent and corporate. This experience granted Hebba the platform to work for organizations such as the National Geographic and Rotary International.

She is an Arabic Certified Court and Medical Interpreter and has been practicing Arabic >< English legal, medical, and community interpretation and translation in the USA for more than 10 years in person, via the telephone, or by video.

Hebba is a people-person and is able to interact and achieve transparency in communication by bridging cultural gaps. She takes great pride in her work and her commitment to leaving a lasting impression on the public as an asset serving the mission of organizations.
